1 ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A device for checking user identification includes a calculation unit which calculates a check value by applying a user-specific formula to a randomly generated number, and a matching unit which checks if the check value matches a user-entered value that is entered by a user in response to the randomly generated number presented to the user.